FOREWORD

GEOFFREY WARDLE STAFFORD, Litt. D.

There have been few more fascinating figures in the early history of New England than Anne Marbury Hutchinson. Born at Alford in Lincolnshire, England, the daughter of a clergyman of the established church, she came of the best stock. Her mother, Bridget Dryden, was a great aunt of the poet. She arrived in Boston, Massachusetts, on the 18th of September, 1634, and at once became a power in the community. She had a specific genius for religion. Her teaching was Pauline and Wesleyan—before the days of Wesley. She believed in a Covenant of Grace; and the words of St. Paul were often upon her lips, "by grace are ye saved through faith."

She came into contact early in her career with the theocracy in Boston who disapproved strongly of her teaching. She was essentially a practical religionist; a pioneer in new movements. She was one of the first pharisees of the country; she started the first women's prayer meeting; she believed in and practiced the peaceful solution to the problems of life; she conducted informal services of public worship; and today, testimony is borne to her influence by the Statue which has been erected in her honor outside the State House in Boston.

If ever there was a martyr to the cause of truth, it was Anne Marbury Hutchinson. That she might live in comparative peace and not be in constant conflict with the authorities, she moved to Rhode Island, and then to Pelham Bay, New York. In 1643, some of the leaders of the Massachusetts Bay Colony persuaded the Indians that Anne Hutchinson was an undesirable and quietly suggested that she should be killed. She and her family were shortly after, massacred, and her earthly life came to a close; but her influence lives on. She is the spiritual mother of all those progressive souls who are divinely discontented with things as they are. "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord; even so, saith the Spirit, for they rest from their labors and their works do follow them."

of the children of the

REV. FRANCIS MARBURY AND BRIDGET DRYDEN

The subjoined analyses of the families antecedent to the sons and daughters of the Rev. Francis Marbury and his second wife, Bridget Dryden, are designed primarily as guide-posts for the interested traveler along the "back-trail". The limited size of this publication necessarily confines its author to the preparation of the simplest type of "road map", making no pretext whatsoever of being a "Baedeker", and yet, having been personally conducted over the road, the author feels justified in assuring his many cousins that they need have little fear of finding the actual "road" in conflict with the "map."

GENEALOGY IN THE PACIFIC NORTHWEST

The growing demand for information concerning genealogy and allied scientific and cultural subjects prompted a preliminary survey of the public and private libraries of the Northwest. This survey revealed that there is available an amazing amount of genealogical data in the territory contiguous to the Puget Sound basin, namely the states of Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Montana, the Provinces of British Columbia and Alberta and the Territory of Alaska. This data in book and manuscript form embodies at least 200,000 volumes and manuscripts, consisting of the major printed sources of authentic information and several manuscript collections that are unique in North America. The material is widely scattered and up to the present time no listing has been made. In order to make available the use of this information, to coordinate individual research and to awaken dormant interest the Pacific Northwest Foundation for Genealogical Research has been formed.

Genealogy, in its highest sense, is a science, i. e., a body of organized facts. The units of genealogical research, rather than being atoms or fruit flies, are real human beings, not differing fundamentally from ourselves. This science thus becomes at once intensely personal, and very real, requiring an analytical and critical attitude toward reputed facts, while at the same time necessitating an unbiased, open-minded tolerance toward our ancestors themselves; attempting to see the world as they saw it and to think their thoughts. Intimate acquaintance with these ancestors, that can hardly be avoided in genealogical research, often offers a key to present day personal problems.

The Foundation is designed to serve primarily the residents of the Pacific Northwest. This will be accomplished by: (a) Collecting, preserving and publishing manuscripts and original records, (b) Fostering the formation of a major collection at the headquarters of the Foundation which will eventually contain all published authentic genealogical data, (c) Indexing serial collections and collections of family data for ready reference, (d) Facilitating exchange and criticism of data among amateur and professional researchers in genealogy and allied fields, (e) Encouraging new students in these fields thru guidance in the methods of research and sources of data, (f) Stimulating interest in genealogy and allied fields thru dignified publicity, pointing out the cultural, intellectual and social values of such investigations.

The first work of the Foundation will be to prepare a central card catalog of the genealogical material available within the area and from this compile a union check list and a "missing" list. Serials, sets and individual volumes are to be cross-indexed under person and place classifications with a view to making our resources readily usable. To further facilitate genealogical and allied research, the Foundation anticipates fostering the centralization of the collections in one location so far as practicable, preferably in an atmosphere of critical, scholarly research.

The population of the Pacific Northwest is at once cosmopolitan and highly integrated. Due to the diverse ancestry of its residents it is desirable to accumulate not only American and British records but also those of Continental Europe. We are one people, regardless of differences in State, Provincial or Territorial governments, and the answer to the question of former residence and that of racial origin reveals that in order to serve adequately the individuals living in this area genealogical resources must include the published archives of the civilized world. It is the hope of the Foundation that eventually the major collection in the Pacific Northwest will be internationally famous for its completeness.

The Pacific Northwest Foundation for Genealogical Research is composed of, (1) The Board of Governors, a self-perpetuating body, and (2) The Fellows, who are elected in recognition of out-standing contributions to the science of genealogy or one of the allied fields. Part of the funds for the work of the Foundation is derived from annual per capita contributions of the various cooperating organizations interested in the work of the Foundation. It is anticipated that this fund will be supplemented by contributions from individuals. The working body of the Foundation, known as the Council, is composed of the various Committees, contributing members, sustaining members and life members. The members of the various Committees are drawn from the representatives of the cooperating societies, libraries and institutions of higher learning and from individuals willing and able to assist in the work of the Foundation. The annual fee for Contributing members is $10.00; Sustaining members, $100.00; and life members, an endowment equivalent to twenty times the annual membership fee.
